

Mid-Season of Arizona Winter Resorts

CENTER OF SOCIAL LIFE IS INGLESIDE CLUB

The Ingleside Country Club is not only the center of social life at Ingleside but is a factor in the gaiety of town residents. Every day notes the names of tourists and Phoenixians who motor to the delightful club house in its ideal location south of Camelback mountain, in the heart of the famous Ingleside Orange Groves. It is a most attractive setting for a luncheon dinner or dance and society has learned to recognize the fact that Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the vice president of the United States, who gave a beautifully appointed luncheon there on the occasion of her recent visit to Arizona and numberless affairs will be given there throughout the season. The attractive setting it offers for garden fetes, alfresco dinners and luncheons makes it especially popular with the easterner. While its possibilities as a place in which to entertain is appreciated by society in town it is doubly enjoyed by the permanent residents of the club who enjoy countless informal amusements planned for their particular pleasure. The afternoon tea, the card evening, the desert picnic are a few of the events to make their stay at the picturesque suburban interesting. There are the usual Country Club sports, tennis, golf and croquet, while hunters can find quail within half a mile of the club house, and there are, in season, ducks on Salt River, which runs some three miles south of Ingleside. Piner have also entertained the distinguished club woman and there have been innumerable club events in her compliment.

Clubs featuring conservation will be interested in the following contribution of Lucy Terrill Ellis:

"Mrs. John Dickman Sherman, head of the conservation work of the General Federation, with her husband and son, ate their Thanksgiving dinner in their summer home in the mountains of Colorado. The day after Christmas she expects to go to Washington to attend the convention of the American Civic Association. Mrs. Sherman is a member of the National Park Committee and is especially interested in the program. From Washington she goes to New York to make arrangements for space for the exhibits she is planning as a feature of the conservation program during the biennial convention which will be held ten days of May, 1916. From New York she goes to Chicago for several weeks. This explains her inability to attend the Arizona Federation in January, as was anticipated. The Republican has been most generous in giving club women and club programs recognition and will give space to a portion of the 1915-16 circular letter just received from Mrs. John Dickman Sherman. All state chairmen of conservation are now members of the General Federation. This method of committee formation establishes a closer relationship in the department membership and increases the responsibility of the state chairmen. The forty-nine state chairmen, together with the department chairmen and vice chairmen, constitute the working majority of the conservation department of the General Federation. Each member of this department is a necessary factor in the work, every chairman recognizes the need of working together with enthusiasm and promptness and is convinced that an understanding of our natural resources is one of the most important divisions of work in which the General Federation of Women's Clubs is engaged. In her pamphlet Mrs. Sherman touches upon The Public Domain, Natural Scenery and National Parks, Service Forests, Insects, Shade Trees, Birds, Water and Waterways, Lincoln Highway, and Soil.

Of National Park Pictures she says: "The Department of the Interior has on hand a splendid collection of national park pictures. There are moving pictures and also still pictures for lantern slide use. They were taken last summer under the direction of the assistant to the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Stephen T. Mather, who has administrative charge of national parks. Descriptive matter will accompany each set of pictures. Through the courtesy of the Department of the Interior, the National Club of the General Federation are to have the opportunity of using the new national park pictures. Arrange for at least one national park program during the season, and improve this exceptional opportunity. If possible, have an evening meeting and invite the families and friends of the club members. The purpose is to spread the gospel of natural scenery and national parks. Do this in any way that is best suited to the conditions in your community. For further information concerning the use of the pictures and requests for national park literature, communicate with Mr. Robert Sterling Yard, in charge of the National Park Publicity Bureau, Mines Building, Washington, D. Weather Bureau To Study Where The Water All Goes

Comprehensive Study of Evaporation To Be Made if Prof. Smith's Recommendation Is Accepted

Having concluded strenuous labors to provide itself with the means of determining water supply, the Arizona section of the United States Weather Bureau is now immersed in the work of discovering things about where the water goes. Section Director Briggs has already made good headway in his installations to determine evaporation at the Roosevelt dam, and now he is taking up with the agricultural college of the University of Arizona, the problem of extending the exploratory work to include the entire state—four different sets of climate that Arizona possesses. It is on the application of Prof. G. E. P. Smith, the irrigation expert of the university, that the weather man is considering four new evaporation installations. Prof. Smith, in his present deep study into the relation of evaporation to the duty of water, wants the information that the delicately adjusted apparatus of the weather bureau can give him, to confirm some theories he has, or to give him the foundation for new ones. It is proposed to install still water evaporation apparatus at the following points:

Yuma. Here the climatic conditions approach those of the extreme lowlands, for practically sea level conditions prevail.

Children's agricultural clubs in rural communities. Instruction in agriculture should be given in every "grade" and normal school. Through your county superintendent of schools heart of the work done in agriculture in the public schools. Many superintendents are now urging the work in agriculture and school gardens be a part of the school course.

She asks that club women read "Our National Defense—a Patriotic Duty," by George H. Maxwell. For information concerning the shade tree campaign, communicate with the chairman of the forestry division, Miss M. L. Beck, Fayetteville, Ark. For information on this subject, and forestry in general, read the magazine American Forestry.

Interest in the roadside planting of the Lincoln Highway is steadily increasing. The work is well under way in the thirteen states through which the Highway passes. In other states the planting of roads tributory to the Lincoln Highway is receiving active attention.

Moving pictures of the Lincoln Highway, seven thousand feet of film covering the entire distance from New York to San Francisco, were recently taken under the direction of the Lincoln Highway Association. These pictures are available for club programs and entertainments given under the auspices of the club women.

Full information concerning the moving pictures and the roadside planting of the Lincoln Highway may be had from Mrs. Elmer E. Kendall, Sunrise Ranch, Grass Range, Montana, who is chairman of this committee. Send to her for leaflets recently issued. Information concerning the moving pictures may also be had from the secretary of the Lincoln Highway Association, Detroit, Mich.

Madison Improvement Club will hold its annual election of officers Thursday afternoon, January 6. Mrs. Seward, principal of the district school, gave a pleasant talk on "Education" at the regular monthly business meeting last week.

The Friday club held its monthly luncheon last week following an interesting program on King George II, with Mrs. Smith Ely as chairman. The Orangewood Pinnons club held a brief business session Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Morehead. Following the meeting Mrs. P. L. Sterkel, president of the club and her tiny daughter Margaret Elizabeth were the recipients of a baby shower. Many beautiful gifts were showered upon them.

WASHINGTON IS END OF LONG AUTO TRIP

The cross-continent automobile trip made under the auspices of the Southern National Highway Association, which started from San Diego, came to an end the other day when the travelers reached Washington, D. C. The trip was financed by several of the leading citizens of San Diego, and was made for the purpose of creating a national interest in the proposed southern highway across the United States.

The tourists passed through this city about two weeks ago, and their route has taken them through the states of Texas, Mississippi, Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina and Virginia. When they reached Washington they were officially received by Logan W. Page, director of public roads of the department of agriculture, at his office in the Willard building. The time for making the trip from San Diego was exactly twenty-six days.

work, which is outside the actual labor of collecting weather data, for the general purposes of forecasting, has been for the express benefit of the irrigators of the Salt River Valley. Now comes the opportunity to secure an expansion of the system, to embrace new features that will prove beneficial to tillers of the soil all over the state. Crude experiments have already determined in an off hand way, certain data on evaporation, on use in connection with water duty computations. The study of evaporation, that has already started at Roosevelt, will be the basis for much cooperation between the weather bureau and the reclamation service in handling problems of import to the ranchers hereabout. Learning of this work, Prof. Smith and Prof. A. M. McOmie of the experiment station of the U. S. in the valley, have recommended new lines of study. The plan of Prof. Smith has proven the more comprehensive, and comes of his recommendations were sent to the Washington office of the weather bureau Friday. Chief Willis of the bureau, who visited here last year and knows a good deal about the conditions, has proven extremely amiable toward the expansion measures of Director Briggs, and there is a good deal of hope that he will sanction further spreading of the work.
